Re: ENERGY SAVING ACTIONS REQUESTED

Within the last week, we have all been faced with the reality of colder winter temperatures and snow. We have also been advised that our region may face a serious energy shortage this winter due to a combination of a greatly reduced snowpack and less available and affordable energy sources.

King County employees and facilities have been directed by County Executive Ron Sims to take aggressive savings actions to conserve energy on the job, and are suggested to take similar actions at home.

To comply with this order, thermostats in all county occupied Airport buildings have been set to 68 degrees and fans and heat are being turned on as late as possible in the morning and turned off as soon as possible at night. Building lights are being turned off when rooms are not in use or needed for safety and security reasons. Computers, printers, and all electrical appliances are also being turned off when not in use. These energy reduction strategies are predicted to save as much as 6% of our normal energy consumption.

We would like to make users of other Airport facilities aware of the potential energy problem. We also encourage your participation in similar efforts at your site in the spirit of conservation. Thank you for your cooperation and support!
